

Internship Opportunity: Bridging science and practice:
international Movements, NGOs and Foundations.
(Offered by CPT (KTI or COM) & Stichting Boerengroep)

Do you believe science should support the challenges of the people? Would you like to connect research and education more to the challenges and reality of peasants, indigenous peoples, farmers and movements as a way to strengthen and defend food sovereignty?

Description of the internship:

Stichting Boerengroep (peasant/farmers foundation) offers a challenging internship opportunity for a WUR Msc Student! Boerengroep has a broad network of (peasant) movements, NGOs and foundations around the world. Already for a long time it is our dream to connect the Wageningen University more to the challenges and reality of 'the people from the field' in order to strengthen and defend food sovereignty. And that's where you can strongly support us! During your internship you will contact our network and stimulate them to think how students could support them via a thesis field work or an internship. You will collect these research questions, thesis topics or internship opportunities and discuss the outcomes with chairgroups at Wageningen University. Your analysis will give insight in the information needs of our network and will contribute to connecting natural science and social science, and bridging the gap between science and practice. The approved topics can then be published online, so that we can link students to the (peasant)movements, NGOs and foundations as a way to work towards food sovereignty. In short: a challenging internship with a strong impact!

Interested?

You're most welcome to join the team! Send a mail to st.boerengroep@wur.nl with topic 'INTERNSHIP' and we can make an appointment to further discuss the topic.